

MEDIATORS TO ADJUST DISPUTE

Announcement Follows the Meeting of Railroad Managers and Union Leaders.

Arrangements to confer with the railroad managers this afternoon.

Lee Proposes Mediation.
Chairman Elisha Lee, for the railroads, in rejecting the brotherhood's demands at the conference today, and proposing mediation, made a statement in part as follows:

"After such consideration, it is our judgment that the proposals which the men have supported by their vote involve such extraordinary changes in operating methods and such radical revision in established bases of compensation as to make it apparent that there is little probability of our being able to harmonize our differences of opinion unless this result can be brought about through the federal board of mediation and conciliation, which was created to assist the parties in just such circumstances as now confront us."

Railways Want Settlement.
The national conference committee of the railways is as anxiously anxious as your committee can be to reach some amicable adjustment of the matters involved in the present controversy, but we are convinced that in the end we shall have to invoke the friendly offices of the federal board of mediation.

Can Act Effectively.
"It is not open to question that whatever we can do by direct negotiations we can also do just as quickly and as effectively through mediation; and experience has demonstrated that a common ground could be reached through the mediators in cases where the parties have been wholly unable to reach such common grounds through direct negotiations."

PLENTY OF WORK ON ROCK PILE FOR ALL WHO CANNOT FIND JOBS

Individuals who loiter around pool halls and who say they cannot find work in El Paso will get it on the municipal rock pile if they are arrested, according to Judge Paul Thomas, of the police court.

One man arraigned before Judge Thomas Wednesday morning pleaded that he could not find work.

"But you told me the first time that if you could not find work you would leave the city," said the judge.

"Well, judge, give me another chance and I will leave town this time," said the vagrant.

"That is what they all say," said Judge Thomas. "I will give you a job this time, and when you are through with it I advise you to leave the city—three days on the rock pile."

LEAP FROM TRENCHES WITH JOY TO GO AT GERMANS; ALL TIRED OF TRENCH LIFE

London, Eng., Aug. 9.—It used to be said that trench warfare had a tendency to destroy a soldier's keenness in attack. Nobody who talks with the wounded can think it has this effect on the new army. Officers and men all speak with excitement and delight of "going over." That is the universal phrase.

One officer put it, "Going over means to us the dash into open air and freedom after the tedious camping life of the trenches. We are all fed up with trench life. We had been shut up behind the bars of our trench all these months, and now we were free. There was no need to urge the men on when they were climbing on and up. They were wild to get out," and this was the view of a man from Bedford who was full of enthusiasm for the great push.

"It was as though the war had become a sleep," he said, "and it was something to be done to it. The bombardment was wicked. It was 24 hours a day. But the war was cruel. We felt it. I can tell you. And so for the Germans, when we took them it seemed as if the war had gone into their heads. They were dazed, more like children than men. Whenever you got near them, they began crying. Merz, Kamerado."

Like School Boys.
"But when the bombardment ceased and we left the trenches we were like school boys. I had been waiting for this for a year. I shall never forget it. We had been afraid we were never going to get at the Germans, and there we were in among their trenches. Didn't we let them have a bomb or two?"

In the same strain an officer from Kent spoke of the fascination of raiding. These little raids are regarded as a sort of holiday from the tedium of trench life, and a fairly clean picnic too. He had taken 25 men out on one of these expeditions near Arras, and had brought them all back again, one man with a bullet in the leg and himself with a bullet in the shoulder. The excitement was a kind of passion, he explained, and there is tremendous keenness among the men for the job. Some soldiers want to be all ways at it. The fun of the whole thing is the look on the faces of the Germans when you get to their trenches. He said that the raising of the flag of the happy inspiration of the war. They had broken the monotony of trench life and kept the Germans in perpetual suspense.

People used to wonder how the clerks and factory workers of Lancashire would stand military life and what kind of soldiers they would make. There can be no doubt of the answer after the wonderful fighting of the Manchester men. It was talking to a wounded man of the regiment, one of ten men employed in a weaving mill before the war. His battalion was to start at 7.30 to take the trenches. The 7.30 men were to go bridges across the trenches when they had taken them and the 8.30 men were to follow on and sweep over the trenches into the village.

GERMANS HARRY OVER CAPTURE

The first rush was a curious success, and before the 8.30 men started German prisoners were coming in in great numbers. It was a curious spectacle, for the German prisoners were so relieved to find themselves out of the bombardment that they were shouting and joking and singing. The German soldiers began to think that perhaps the Germans holding the village would be just as happy to be taken as the British. The officers were described as looking as if they were dressed for parade, with their uniforms quite clean. The trench and dugout were all filled up like dressing rooms in a hotel. There was electric light, a great water supply, and abundance of clean clothes, shirts, linen, boots, washbasins, shaving gear, cigars, cigarettes and food. It looked as if the German officers had had time to be there for many a long month.

Strange Incident in Big Push.
An officer with an eye for the mysterious noted two strange incidents in the great push. Just before the offensive four dogs came out of the German lines and crossed over to our lines. The Germans whistled and shouted, but the dogs held steadily on. Our men, of course, killed it as an enemy. The other incident was a curious one. In the war-scoured zone there is a road called Crucifixion avenue. When our men reached this road they found every tree destroyed by the bombardment (the road had been flanked by trees on both sides). But the large crucifix still stood there, and when it was examined closely it was impossible to find a single trace of shrapnel fire.

CHARGES LACK OF COOPERATION

"Jack" Happer Says Workers For Fall Congresses Not Pulling Together.

Charges of lack of cooperation on the part of the chamber of commerce and the International Dry Farming congress by John A. Happer, of the board of control of the Irrigation congress, caused a small furor at a luncheon Wednesday of the two boards at Hotel Sheldon. Mr. Happer's remarks concerned the joint meeting of the congresses at El Paso beginning Oct. 14, for which the two boards are expected to be working in cooperation.

The differences were settled however, Mr. Happer made a public apology and the meeting broke up harmoniously.

"I haven't seen anything that looked like cooperation displayed in the work between the International Dry Farming congress and the Irrigation congress," said Mr. Happer. "There has been nothing but a poor spirit of cooperation shown by the chamber of commerce, its secretary and the dry farming congress."

Hanford Refutes Statements.
Dr. R. K. Hanford, representing the Soil Products exposition, which will be held in conjunction with the two congresses and the dedication of Elephant Butte dam this fall, refuted the statements of Mr. Happer. "Evidently Mr. Happer is much mistaken," said he. "I go into the office of Mr. Hooker, who is in charge of the Irrigation congress office at the chamber of commerce, almost every day and give whatever cooperation I can. I have taken our Mr. Hamilton, the publicity man for the exposition, to Mr. Hooker numerous times and asked Mr. Hooker if he had any publicity regarding the congress which he wanted released. Each time Mr. Hooker told me that he would first have to consult the board of control of his congress."

Irrigation Congress Overlooked.
Secretary Hooker said one of the instances of lack of cooperation was when a bill poster was printed advertising the dry farming congress and soil products exposition, but which did not have any reference to the Irrigation congress. Mr. Hooker stated he did not care for bill poster advertising, but never the less the dry farming congress and exposition officials did not show the courtesy of giving space to the Irrigation congress.

"If Mr. Hooker will recall I went into my office while he was there and showed him the poster. He made no comment or said so many things that were 'good.' It seems proper that he should have made his complaint then and not now," said Dr. Hanford.

Mr. Happer Apologizes

After these statements Julius Kravaker, of the local advisory board for the dry farming congress, said he could see no foundation for the statements of Mr. Happer.

R. M. Dudley, of the same board, became heated at the remarks of Mr. Happer and demanded an explanation. "I think you owe the gentlemen here an apology for the remarks you have just made," Mr. Happer, though he believed you made them on the spur of the moment without much thought," said Dr. Hanford. Then Mr. Happer apologized.

Chairman R. Burr Orndorff suggested the grievances had been thrashed out and the men should work hand in hand hereafter. This was agreed when the meeting adjourned.

Trade Exposition Suggested

P. K. Hanford, director general of the International Soil Products exposition, suggested some sort of street decorations for the fall festivities. The matter was referred to the chairman of both boards for the appointment of the committee.

His chief suggestion, however, was a trade excursion week during the events at El Paso this fall. "This has worked very successfully wherever it has been tried," said Mr. Hanford. "Chicago had an excursion somewhat similar to what I am suggesting and it profited greatly. My suggestion is to appoint a committee of manufacturers, jobbers and bankers to arrange the excursion. A representative group of men of these industries should go on the excursion which would cover El Paso's trade territory. Special prices could be established for the week. I am sure it would bring from 65 to 80 per cent of the trade of this district."

This suggestion also was left for the action of the two chambers of the boards.

Will Estimate On Advertising

The chairman of boards, were instructed to make an estimate of the number of folders advertising the four events, they will need.
